600 Pay Tribute
To Mack At 51st Birthday Event

Some hundred persons joined the main dinner party of Northern Michigan University's centennial celebration, which was held at the Packard Center last night. The festivities included a dinner and dance.

Plaques and a colorful banner were given to Northern Michigan University president John W. Mack, who turned 51 last Tuesday. The large crowd was attended by representatives of various organizations and groups within the district resulted in a lengthy dinner program, moderated by Michael W. King, campus director of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

The meeting also featured the keynote address by John W. Mack, who was elected to the 100th House of Representatives, which adjourned last week.

State Rep. Daniel J. Stoddard, member of the House of Representatives, served as master of ceremonies at the event.

Mack also addressed the keynote speech, entitled "The Michigan System," in which he discussed the importance of higher education and its role in the state's economic development.

Mack, who is a graduate of Northern Michigan University, has served as president of the university since 1989.

Milliken Seeks Meeting
With NMI Student Leaders

In the past few days, Northern Michigan University President John W. Mack has been in contact with various student groups, including the Northern Michigan University Student Government Association (NSGA). The meeting is scheduled to take place next week.

The meeting will focus on issues such as campus safety, student housing, and academic programs.

Mack emphasized the importance of student involvement in the decision-making process and the role of the university in supporting student success.

After the meeting, Mack expressed his confidence in the NSGA's ability to address the concerns of the student body and work collaboratively with the administration to achieve the best outcomes for the campus community.
