The Mining Journal

The school year that is now coming to an end at Northern Michigan University has been one of the most difficult in the university's history, as it has been on the campuses of many other colleges and universities across the land. Dr. John J. Jamrach, the university's president, took cognizance of this in an all-too-excellent address at the commencement exercises at the university Sunday.

"The man who shouldered the burdens stemming from a variety of campus disturbances last fall was, in the votes of those few who had actually been in the thick of it, the president. His rulings were aimed against a convulsion of an estimated 3,000 students from various groups.

H. J. J. Jamrach, the university's president, took cognizance of this in an all-too-excellent address at the commencement exercises at the university Sunday.

The university's president, took cognizance of this in an all-too-excellent address at the commencement exercises at the university Sunday.

The program began with a Bach organ prelude, a Bach aria with a conductor on the organ, a Bach overture on the organ, and a Bach concerto on the organ. The concert was well-attended.

Replies To 48 Women

Dear Ladies:

I am glad to receive your letter expressing your opinion to the editor of The Mining Journal dated May 27, 1970.

Your proposal states that we should spend the day in mourning for those who are not with us, and that we should be at the ceremonies of mourning. The day that you are referring to is Memorial Day. Memorial Day is a time to remember those who have served and lost their lives for our country.

In this day of mourning, we remember those who have served and lost their lives for our country. We remember those who have served and lost their lives for our country.

I hope this information is helpful.

Sincerely,

Edward J. Brown