

Funds Granted For Learning Center At NMU

Members of the Michigan Legislature were lauded today for making funds available for construction of a new learning resources center at Northern Michigan University.

The university president, Dr. Edgar L. Harden, praised the legislators for their action in giving the university the "go-ahead" to begin construction of the $5,500,000 unit. He said the building will be one of the greatest facilities to be built on any university or college campus in the country.

Action on appropriation of funds for the center had been temporarily suspended by the Legislature during debate over Gov. George Romney's proposed state austerity budget and cutbacks which had been imposed on the budgets of all state-supported colleges and universities.

Harden said the building, which will house a 300,000 volume library, stations for 2,000 students, over 200 faculty offices and other resource facilities, is the product of many years of planning on the part of educational leaders to support a unique concept to make use of innovative changes in technology. He said that many legislators, while favoring construction of the building, thought it so unique that it should be on a major college campus.

Officials, Student Leaders At Northern Meet; Report Given

Normal conditions prevailed on the Northern Michigan University campus today, following a report on a meeting held between administration officials and student body groups late Tuesday afternoon to discuss student demonstrations.

The announcement made on the meeting, which was attended by NMU officials and representatives of the dissident students who had been involved in the demonstrations, along with the elected student body group, contained three major points.

Among those attending the parley, held in the University Center, were Dr. Edgar L. Harden, president of NMU; deans of the university and various administrative personnel.

To Probe Incident

The report issued on the meeting stated that:

1. There will be no further expansion of residence halls until it is determined that the community no longer can accommodate the larger portion of the student body.
 2. Academic standards will be raised for the purpose of promoting academic pride, atmosphere and achievement.
 3. The office of the dean of students, Dr. Allan L. Niemi, would conduct an investigation of the incident involving NMU security policemen and a student Sunday night (in reference to a demonstration student who was injured accidentally Sunday night).
- Efforts to improve dialogue and communications between students, faculty and administration will be emphasized next week beginning with a pre-school workshop, involving leaders of campus organizations.
- At the same time, spokesmen for the NMU student government association and for the athletes and honor students residing in Gries and Spooner Halls reported they were completely dissociated with the demonstrations and were, in fact, against them.

They also pointed out that, although there were a reported 1,000 students participating in the demonstrations, this represents less than one-sixth of the NMU student body.

Four Sign Statement

Signing the statement issued after the meeting of administration officials and representatives of the dissident students were Dr. Lowell Kafer, associate dean of students; Donald Keskey, president of the student government association; Peter Fogo, vice president of the SGA, and Bart Brown, freshman from Hills, Mich., and the reported leader of Monday night's demonstration.

The SGA representatives said that inasmuch as the association is the official student body group, it should be represented at the meeting, even though it had repudiated the demonstrations.

There were no incidents reported Tuesday night involving NMU students. Student demonstrators Sunday night on the NMU campus and Monday night in the downtown area of Marquette.

Chief of Police George G. Johnson said his department is continuing an investigation of the downtown demonstration and that ringleaders will be prosecuted.
