Faculty Senate

President Urged To Discontinue Job Corps Center

The Faculty Senate of Northern not essential to the University-level Michigan University has recomprograms." mended that the University should not seek a renewal of the Job Corps contract for next year unless the present social problems are solved or the entire local Job Corps program is removed from Northern's campus.

The Faculty Senate made its recommendations in response to the request of Northern's president

Dr. John X. Jamrich.

Dr. Jamrich said that future de-cisions concerning the Job Corps Center will be made on the basis of these reports.

The Senate made it clear that they were making its recommenda-tion on the basis of a "limited perspective" and that the perperspective" and that the per-spective was "the effect of the Job Corps program on the faculty and 'regular' students at Northern Michigan."

The Senate stated they had arrived at their conclusion by sampling faculty and student re-action to the local Job Corps pro-gram and "through hearings and personal conservations." It further stated that it seemed appropriate to "categorize these reactions as they pertain to the University's academic activities or the social activities of faculty and students."

A general conclusion drawn by the Senate is that "the Job Corps involvement in the University's ac-tivities in minimal."

Faculty research involving the Job Corps "was apparently discouraged originally and is now limited to one project," the Senate said. The Senate reported that there was little exchange between Job Corps and University classes with a few University classes observing Job Corps classes and "very few" Job Corps enrollees attending University classes. The Senate concluded that "it appears that the Job Corps is quite isolated academically from the rest of the University and that the presence of Job Corps on campus is

"The Job Corps has a very signifi-cant impact on the social activities, primarily of students," the Senate went on to say. It was noted that here are "advantages and disadthere are "advantages and disadvantages" to this, and that some of the faculty have invited Job Corps women into their homes and that some faculty members have acsome cepted invitations to join the Job Corps at the Center in Carey Hall.
"These interactions," the Senate says, "have undoubtedly given the faculty a greater awareness and sympathy for the problems faced by the Job Corps enrollees."

It was noted by the Senate that since the Job Corps enrollees are considered as students on campus, they are able to take part in an array of social activities, "often to the mutual benefit of all students and in spite of the cultural gap between the regular students and Job Corps enrollees.

The Senate continued by saying that these contacts between the two student groups could prove valuable to the regular students in broadening "their awareness of the world and it's problems.

The statement from the Senate is quick to point out that any of these advantages are outweighed by "un-fortunate problems arising from the fact that regular students and Job Corps enrollees share the recre-ational facilities of the University."

The Senate went on to say that they had been made aware of cer-tain incidents in which guests of Job Corps enrollees "have abused and threatened and sometimes even physically attacked regular stu-dents, their guests, and employees of the University." of the University.

One result of this tmosphere, the Senate points out, is that many students seek other places for their extra-curricular activities and do not use such facilities as the Uni versity Center which was specifically designed for their use. Furthermore, the Senate says, student in-volvement in extra-curricular and co-curricular activities is a signifi-cant issue in a total education. Finally it is stated by the Senate that "the complete withdrawal of Job Corps and guests from these facilities is the only realistic solu-tion to an untenable situation."

In conclusion the Faculty Senate placed emphasis on the fact that the social problems arising from the presence of the Job Corps center are due "to the cultural b ack-ground of the Job Corps enrollees and their guests, and not to their race or color."
