

Mercury Subzero Here 11th Time; Airport Low -17

For the fifth time this month and the 11th time this winter, temperatures in Marquette dipped below zero overnight, reaching a low of -7 early this morning.

It was even colder in other parts of the Upper Peninsula. Sault Ste. Marie posted the nation's low of -27 (matching the mark set at Bismarck, N.D., this morning), while L'Anse had -20; the Marquette County Airport -17; Calumet -16; Escanaba, Iron Mountain and Ironwood, -11; and Ironwood, -8.

The siege of cold weather is reminiscent of the winter of

Blizzard Rages In Munising

MUNISING — Heavy snowfall and 20-mile-an-hour north-northwest winds produced a blizzard which has raged in the Munising area since late Thursday 1964-65. By Feb. 12 that year, Marquette had had 14 days with subzero readings, and three more occurred later in the month.

None To Match 1962-63

Neither that winter nor this one (at least, to date!) proved any competition for the winter of 1962-63, however. In Marquette that season, there were 31 days with subzero temperatures, 19 of them in a row in January. Lowest reading that winter was -31 during the record-selling January deep freeze.

So far this winter, Marquette's lowest reading has been -12, posted on Feb. 3 and 4. January's coldest minimum was -10.

Yesterday's temperatures here ranged from a high of 12 to a low of -4, averaging four above zero or 15 degrees below normal for the day. It was the third consecutive day with subnormal readings, U.S. Weather Bureau Meteorologist Earl Hofman reported.

4.8-Inch Snowfall

Thursday's zero range readings were accompanied in Marquette by 4.8 inches of new snow, increasing depth on the ground to 23 inches, greatest

He has been active on the hospital staff of Bell Memorial in Ishpeming, St. Luke's and St. Mary's in Marquette. This will

Three More Students Found Innocent By Judiciary In Sit-In

Three more Northern Michigan University black students were found innocent Thursday night by the Faculty-Student Judiciary Committee on charges stemming from the Dec. 17-18 occupation of the dean of students office during a protest demonstration.

Eight students have appeared before the all-white judiciary committee this week and all have been found not guilty.

Those who faced charges last night were Beverly Bates, Vivian Johnson and Charles Washington, all of Detroit.

The judiciary is composed of three faculty members appointed by the Academic Senate, three students appointed by the Student Government Association and a representative of the dean of students office, who votes in case of a tie. The judiciary does not represent the university administration or the NMU Board of Control.

The protest grew out of charges that a black student was seen with a woman in his dormitory room after hours in violation of university regulations last December. He was found guilty of the charge by a student committee but was later adjudged not guilty by the faculty-student judiciary.

It is not known if any of the "not guilty" decisions last night were by a split vote of the committee.

Contradictory Testimony

The three students last night said they had left the 19-hour sit-in before the $268 in damages and the alleged holding of Dr. Allan L. Niemi occurred. Niemi is vice president of student affairs.

Miss Bates testified that she was present at the sit-in until midnight but then left to return to her dormitory to visit with a sorority sister. She later said she returned to the offices after the sit-in had ended. A witness verified her testimony.

But Niemi, complainant in the case, produced five witnesses who testified that Miss Bates was present at various times throughout the night. Two witnesses stated that they saw her leave the offices when the sit-in ended at 3:15 a.m.

More Conflicting Reports

Miss Johnson pleaded not guilty on the grounds that she left the sit-in at 4:30 p.m. and didn't return again. She produced a witness who testified that she was with Miss Johnson in a dormitory throughout the night.

Karen Reese, assistant dean of students, testified she saw Miss Johnson sitting on the floor of her office at about 11 p.m. A student also said he saw Miss Johnson around 10 p.m. in the offices as he was inspecting for any damages as a representative of student government.

Washington stated that he also left the sit-in about 10:45 p.m. to study in the library and then go to the dormitory. His testimony was verified by a witness. But Mrs. Reese said she saw Washington in the offices for a few hours before she left at 11 p.m.

Further hearings are scheduled for the 21 black students charged with being present after the 5 p.m. closing of the offices, but it was not known when they will be resumed.
